

Penhale

Penhale sits on the headland above Holywell Bay.

An overgrown path leads to a vast expanse of grassland.

To the right of the path sits a small island.

A rusted metal fence signals the approach to Penhale.

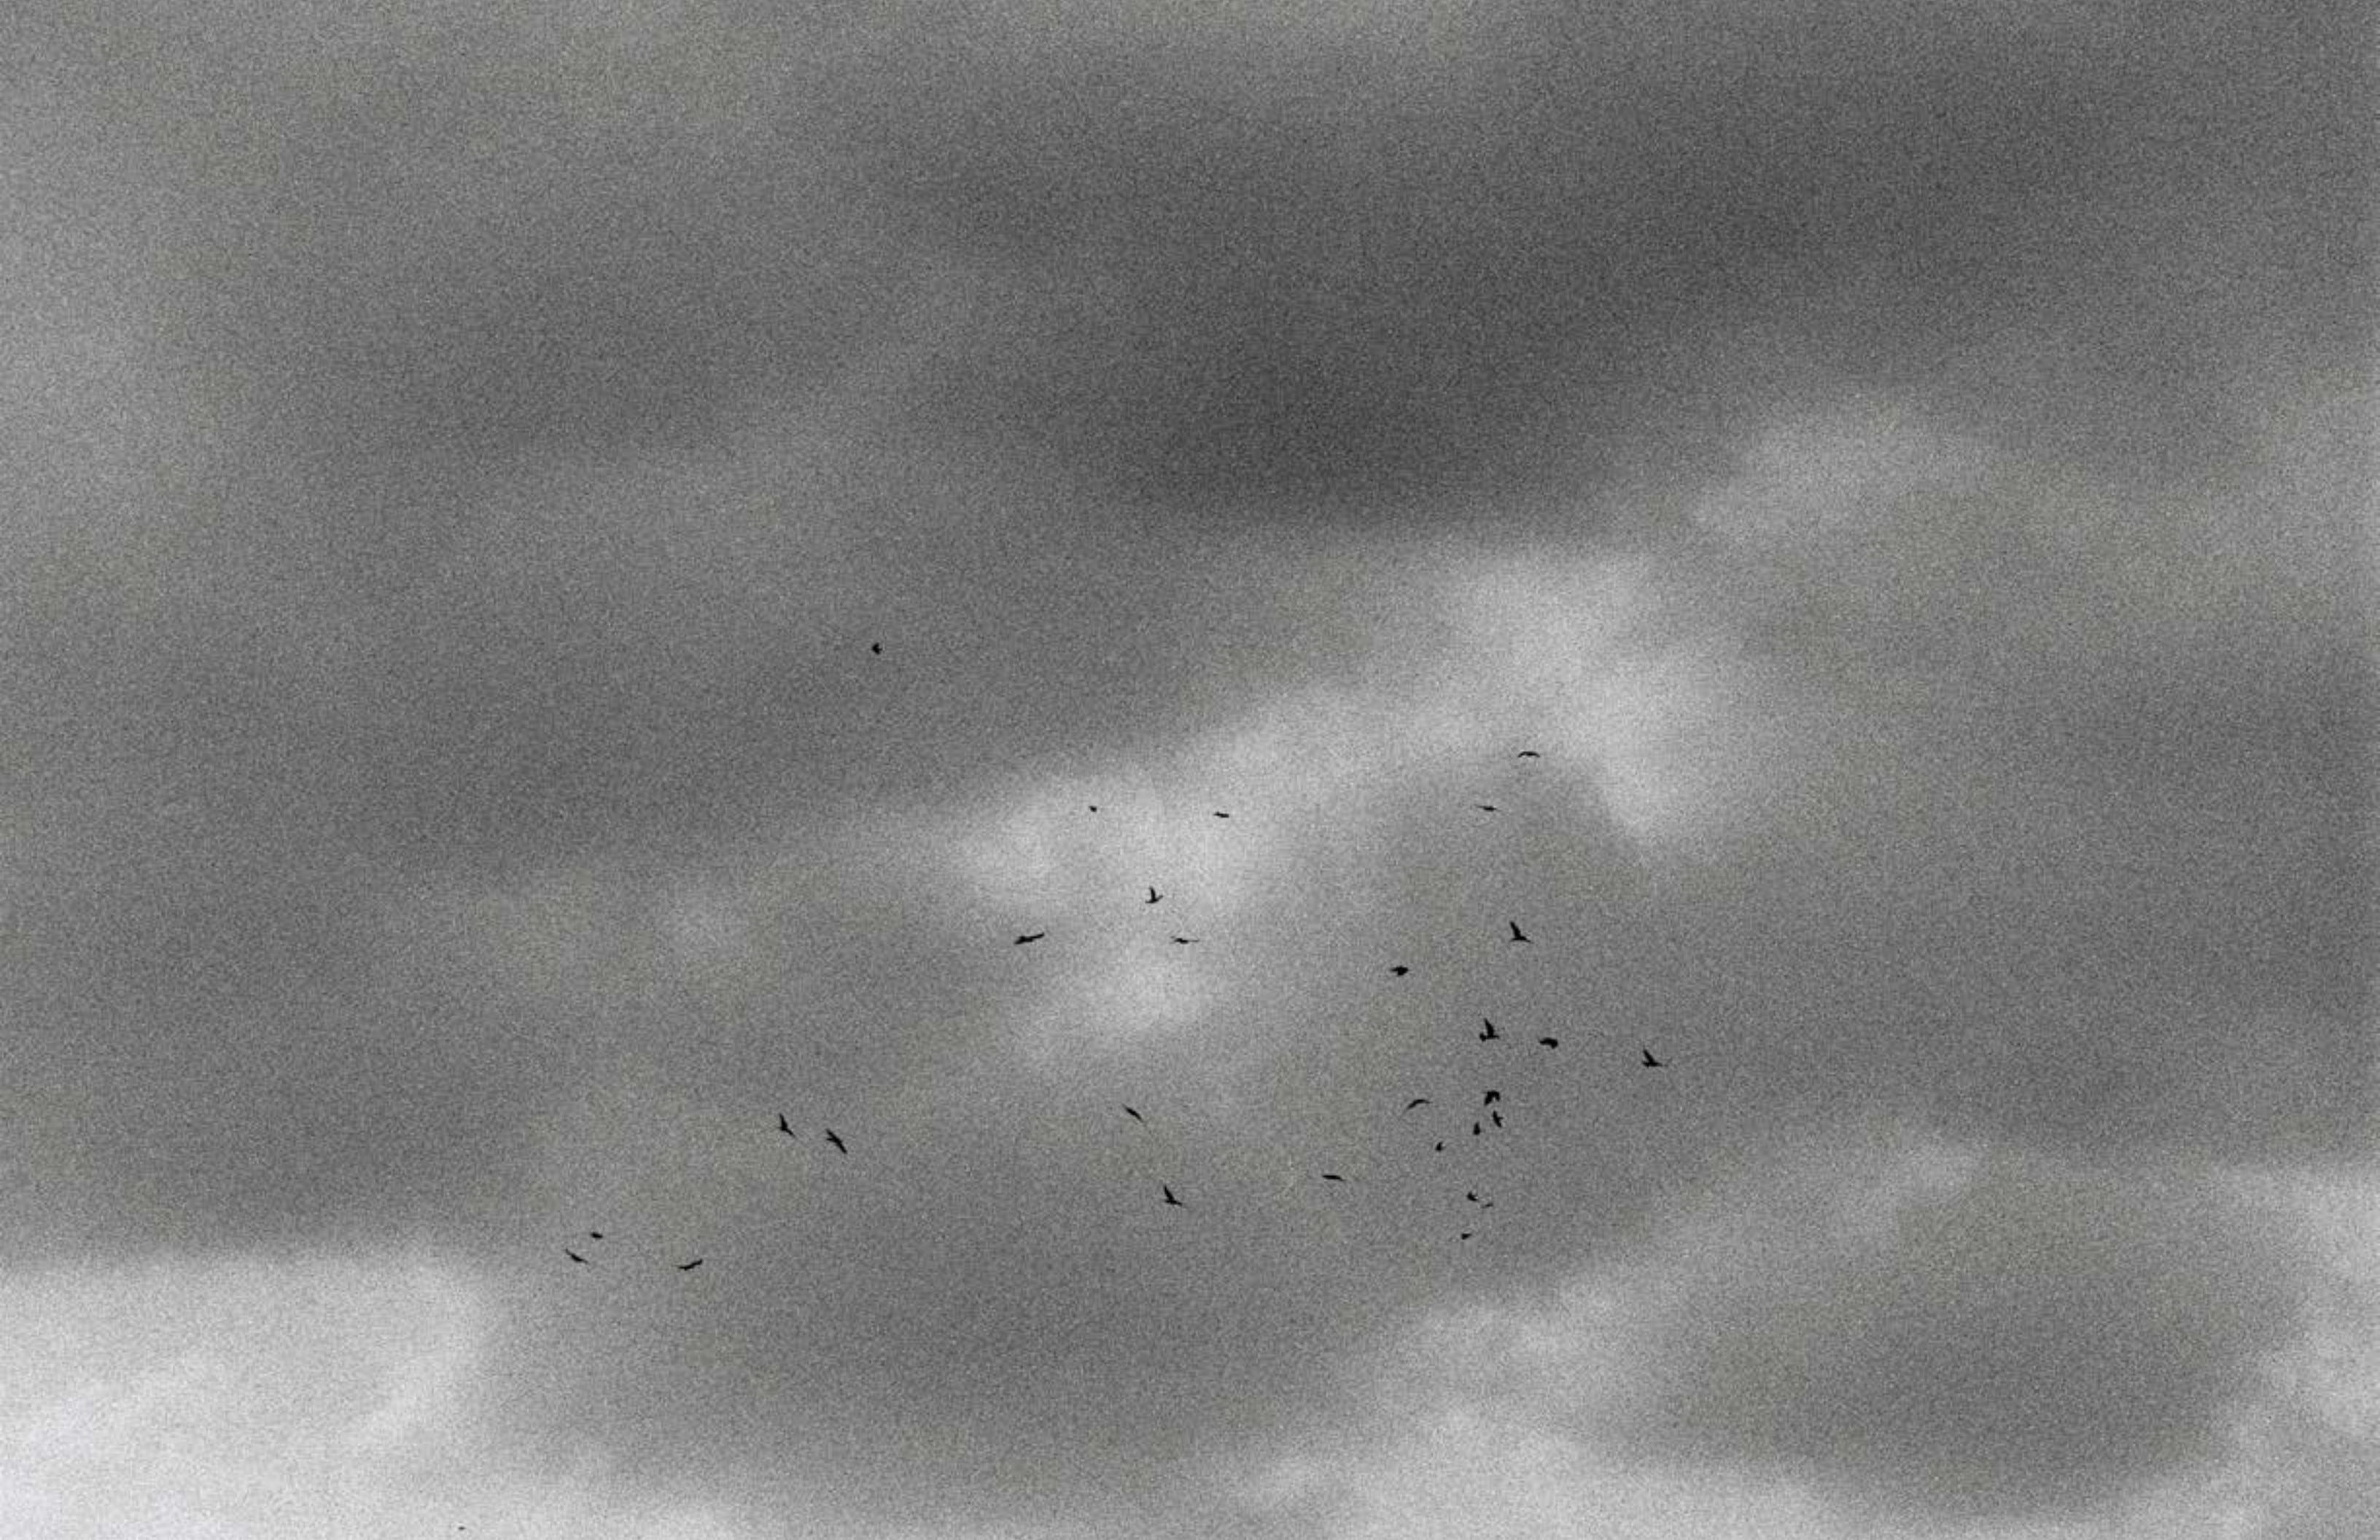

A cave becomes visible.

Birds fly overhead.

A circular metal shape stands at the entrance of Penhale.

Followed by many.

The soft circular shapes are soon replaced by hard, straight edged concrete buildings.

They stand deserted, isolated in the landscape without purpose.

A once busy place now remains still and unchanging.

The future of Penhale is unknown.

Penhale Camp, MOD

Penhale was a Military Of Defence training camp in Holywell Bay, Cornwall. The camp closed down in 2010 leaving the buildings empty and unused. Local residents have been severely affected by the camps closure, as it would bring custom through the quieter times of year. Three years later and the residents are still unaware of the plans for the site, it continues to remain undeveloped.

Mir Gwilliam-Parkes
2013